

Social Responsibility in Markets

Abstract

The talk addresses the question how social responsibility in production can be fostered by market design. In experimental markets we study market designs with various competition and information policies and analyze the effects on consumers' as well as producers' ability and willingness to foster socially responsible production under these conditions.